

Why A Facial Is A Great Gift for Anyone

It's that time of year when you're looking for the ideal gifts for the people in your life – but there's always someone who you think probably has everything, and you really don't know what kind of gift will put a smile on their face.

Everyone loves to be pampered though, so why not look into buying someone a voucher for a facial treatment? It's the perfect way to tell someone that you care about them, and give them an opportunity to take 30, 60 or even 90 minutes to relax and take care of themselves for a while.

Facials Are Relaxing

If you're not sure about whether someone would want a massage; perhaps they are very particular or always have massage in their calendar anyway, a facial is a really relaxing treat for the person who is always on the go. You simply can't look at your cell phone or work while you're having your face massaged and scrubbed with delicious smelling products. It's the perfect way to get someone to chill out and devote themselves a little me-time.

A Facial Makes You Feel Good

There's no getting away from the fact that a facial treatment leaves your skin looking and feeling amazing, so if you think that someone special needs a little pep in their step, buy them a facial!

Sometimes people can neglect things like skincare and facial treatments because they are busy, or just can't seem to justify spending money on themselves, so let them know that YOU think they are worth it and present them with the gift of some gorgeous pampering.

Facials Can Be Functional

Of course, booking in for a facial is a treat, but if someone has skin concerns like acne, rosacea or is worried that their skin is looking tired and dehydrated, a facial treatment can really sort them out. If your teen has no clue how to look after her (or his) skin, a facial can be educational too. Add in a voucher for a few homecare products and set your child on the road to good skin care habits for the rest of their life.

A Facial Gift Certificate Is Thoughtful

You could just buy a novelty mug, give them an Amazon gift card or opt for chocolates. But if you've gone to the effort of finding a great skincare clinic, and then buying a facial voucher, it really shows not just a bit more effort but also originality. A voucher for skincare is like a little hug – a way of saying “I really thought you would enjoy this” and can also be a nudge to your loved one that they could give THEMSELVES the gift of precious me-time too.

All in all, a facial says, “I care” much more than a rushed, badly thought out gift that will end up never being used, so why not treat someone?
